Thank You

The Taylor County, West Virginia will soon be available in the library thanks to the generosity of member, Charlotte Rice.

Also, Thanks goes to Louise Pilmer for donating The Genealogical Helper to our society.

It's Not in the Mail

Due to the increase in postage, future newsletters will be mailed on a quarterly basis.

The newsletter will be published monthly and will be available at the regular meeting.

"Shoulda's Don't Count"

A pat on the back for all those involved with the History of Warren County, 1987 Edition. Very interesting. My husband has always said 'shoulda's don't count, I shoulda' submitted an article regarding my ancestors!

Regards,
June Gerbode

Our Travel Itinary

A tour of the new State Historical Library is scheduled for ~~Tuesday~~, Thursday, April 21. Cars will be leaving the Presbyterian Church parking lot at 11:30.

It's Coming

It's time to think of pork loin sandwiches, carnival rides and blue ribbons.

Fair classes were reviewed this month with a few changes we think you will like. Exhibits will be grouped as follows: Photographs & Portraits, Documents, Genealogical Research Material and Heirlooms and Artifacts with a new division: Warren County Heritage. The old classes are still active with some condensing and rearranging. The new division consists of three classes - 1. Historical poster depicting the history of a Warren county town, township, organization, church or event. 2. Historical poster depicting the history of a method of art, craft, or custom common to Warren County, 3. Old photograph depicting life in Warren County.

A copy of the rules and fair classes can be obtained by sending a SASE to Molly Bowlin, 802 Kennedy, Indianola, Iowa 50125.

Bowlin, Crawford, Marsh ...

Time to submit your family

surnames for the current WCGS Surname Index. A copy of your surnames we now have on file are attached to this newsletter. Please use this sheet to update and make any corrections. Include collateral surnames if you wish.

You may not have extensive data on these names, but perhaps another researcher will have just what you need.

If there is no attached surname sheet, we do not have your surname list. On an 8 1/2" X 11" sheet of paper include your name and address and list your surnames. Bowlin, Crawford, Marsh . . .

Thank You,
 Molly

Send It TODAY

WCGS members are expected to file their pedigree chart, as far back as possible, with the Family Records and Surname Committee.

A Pedigree Chart is being included with this newsletter for your convenience.

Send your completed charts to Molly Bowlin, Committee Chairman, 802 Kennedy Street, Indianola, Iowa 50125.

A Tribute to My Father

Genealogy -- a history of the descent of a person or family from an ancestor; we collect names, dates, and pictures, but too often we neglect to record the qualities of the men and women who are the ancestors.

This article is to be a tribute to my father who would have been 100 years old last November 7, Andrew J. Simmerman, son of John Harvey and Mary Jane (Stewart) Simmerman, grandson of Harvey and Margaret Simmerman and Thomas and Catherine (Cue) Stewart. His great grandparents were David and Mary Simmerman and James and Catherine Cue. He died in 1972 at the age of 84.

His life spanned perhaps one of the most interesting times in history. It began after the days of dire hardships of the pioneer, but still in a time when one had to depend upon oneself for most of the necessities of life. Perhaps growing up in such an atmosphere gave him those qualities necessary to survive the depression years and caused him to adopt a way of life characterized by working and saving for the things one needed. He was not famous -- just an ordinary hard-working, clean-living man. Was not being 'who he was' and the qualities he showed in his living -- those which showed a genuineness of character -- the greatest contribution he could give to his descendants?

He was friendly and outgoing and never moody, nor was he harsh in his dealings with others. He was respectful, and so, was respected by family and friends. He was cheerful and brought humor into our lives. We learned to do our work first and play later, and almost always there was time in the afternoon and in the evening after chores to play. There was music in our lives. Our parents saw to it that we had music lessons. Dad played the harmonica and sometimes we had jam sessions with him on it, or singing with us, and my sister at the piano. Sometimes he took requests for his harmonica, and the fact that, usually, the modern tunes requested sounded like "Turkey in the Straw," or a similar song from that era, only made it more fun.

He cared about people and things. He saw that his livestock was well cared for. He built good fences and kept his farmstead in good repair. We find breeding and planting records on the inside walls of barns and sheds, and he kept journals from which we are gleaning such information as, "January 14, 1937, 'Aleine was hurt'", and when he bought his first automobile.

When he was in the field alone, what did he think of? Things that needed to be done to make life easier (or to survive)? Did he think about what he wanted for his family? for his friends? Was this when he formulated some of the "editorials" that he wrote on scraps of paper -- some of which we have found in his papers? Surely, he wanted what was right, though it might cause him sacrifice.

He never quit learning and thinking and helping, and always held a positive outlook on life. He must have found this little poem somewhere and it appealed to him. We found it in his 1941 journal.

Let us look in the future
Look not in the past with regret;
The best things in life
Are to happen yet.

He gave us little sayings to guide us, e.g. this rule of thumb, "When in doubt; say NO," and this one he gave complete with demonstration! "It's not what you wear, but how you wear it that counts." He was strong and we could always depend on him to be there when we needed him -- to help us or to rejoice with us.

I guess the big thing in my childhood years was the dream of building a new house. This was a family secret (probably made so to keep the kids from blabbing it all over!) and we all planned and saved in whatever way we could to make the dream come true. The house was built in 1935. At about the same time the natural gas line was run from the main line to Indianola, and homeowners along the way could apply for hook-up, so we had the first rural home in the county to have natural gas installed. There was no electricity in our community so we had natural gas lights and cook stove. However, being first with something was unusual for our family; most families had radios long before we did, for instance.

As I remember, none of us minded that we did not have many luxuries. We had ponies, dogs and cats and made pets of calves and lambs, and all of us agree that we had a full and happy childhood. At the same time, our parents taught us by example and instruction such things as good manners, good morals, love, honesty, self-discipline, self-reliance and other qualities they knew we needed to be happy adults.

Those men and women, sons and daughters of the hardy pioneer, who lived from the time when the horse was the "vehicle" of work and play, through the thrill of the horseless carriage, and on the sophisticated automobile and airplane, then watched with interest man's walk on the moon had a very special experience. The change was slow, giving then a chance to absorb it, adjust to it, and enjoy it. Did living through that period of history and the changes it brought to their lives instill in them those qualities we remember about them and now consider the good things in life?

The generation growing up will see more rapid change, but one wonders if they of the 'biogenetic and computer-driven' society will feel the same depth of experience which their forbears felt watching their world change from the most simple way of living to the exploration of space. Perhaps it is for us, the 'generation between', to help the new generation understand, appreciate, and remember those members of the older hardy generation and all they knew, believed, and lived.
